Comp Plan can’t be wrong

We only have one chance to get this plan “right.” There is no backup plan, and we can’t undo these designations after they’ve been enacted. Preserving farm land for local use should be of utmost priority at a time when grocery inflation is exponentially increasing with no end in sight. Food sovereignty and food security for our community for generations to come will be impacted by this decision. We cannot sacrifice one meter of currently designated agricultural use land. Our prosperity during disaster and into the future as population becomes more dense will be entirely dependent on the locally produced food infrastructure..

Do you want to live in a county dependent on the beef or agriculture policies at the federal or even state level? We MUST protect our local agricultural capacity at all costs, both for disaster readiness but also in preparation for population growth. Our current food system is unsustainable and we must invest in a resilient local food economy. The current proposed comprehensive plan takes a step in the opposite direction.
