Urban Growth Area Options

Comments
I am a resident of unincorporated Clark County southeast of Battle Ground. We returned to the Pacific Northwest after many years away approximately 14 months ago. We chose to return to Southwestern Washington/Clark County because of its deeply rooted history in agriculture and small land holdings and the quality of life that this produces for residents including obtaining fresh produce directly from local farms. The county final EIS underlines that all forecasted population and employment growth in Clark County can be accommodated within current UGAs. The WA Dept of Commerce concurred with this and recently stated, “In our review of the draft comprehensive plan and agricultural lands study, we did not find any discussion clearly demonstrating that the lands proposed for de-designation no longer meet the designation criteria.” The hundreds of acres that Ridgefield, La Center, and Camas are requesting to pave over forever are designated prime agricultural lands and farmlands of statewide importance. Additionally, Battle Ground’s proposed expansion would pave over hundreds of acres of rural lands identified in the Agricultural Lands Study. These lands are a vital and needed resource with respect to local food security, climate change resiliency, and agricultural jobs. The County should honor the recommendations of the Agricultural Advisory Commission, which voted to maintain all existing agricultural designations and requested a moratorium on upzoning of lands that meet the legal criteria for agricultural designation. I urge the Council to adopt an alternative with no urban growth area expansions.
