Climate Change and Resiliency Element Public Participation Plan

Date of Hearing

Comment

I appreciate that Clark County Council and staff will be providing members of the public with "opportunities for early and continuing participation and access to key decision making processes with the Clark County Planning Commission and Clark County Council." I am a long time Clark County resident and join so many others who have experienced the escalating impacts of climate change on our lives, and are greatly concerned that our elected representatives take seriously the urgency of lowering emissions in order to ensure that we and our children will have a safe and resilient future. I had the opportunity to provide feedback to the Consultant and very much appreciate the work of staff and the Consultant team that was done in preparing the meaningful recommendations that are contained in the report, especially regarding active, clear communication and incorporating environmental justice and equity components into the planning process. Informing the public in all of Clark County and encouraging their active participation will provide the basis for what we hope will be meaningful policy decisions throughout the Comprehensive Planning process as it develops it's resilience plan for the impacts of climate change and follows state law regarding adding a Climate Amendment to the Growth Management Act, that will ultimately reduce emissions and vehicle miles traveled here in Clark County. I urge Council members to approve the Public Participation Plan so the work of reducing emissions and planning resilience for the health and welfare of our community can move forward as soon as possible.
