Good morning, Shifters Zero,

I've spent the last 2 weeks digesting the Inflation Reduction Act for Washington's commercial-scale built environment - it's got major opportunity for big buildings to decarbonize faster and more affordably.

- TL;DR? Check out UMC's 1-page Inflation Reduction Act Incentives for both private and tax-exempt commercial-scale buildings.

For commercial-scale buildings ranging from public schools and faith communities to privately owned office buildings and retail, there's new funding to lower buildings' operating costs, improve comfort, and more affordably meet compliance with energy and carbon codes.

It's a lot - where to start? UMC has just published the first several pieces in a series distilling the Inflation Reduction Act for the PNW's built environment. Dive in-

- The Inflation Reduction Act Means Big Bucks for Your Building
- Incentives in Expanded Sec. 179D Can Transform Your Buildings' Bottom Line
- more to come!

I welcome all feedback, questions, and suggestions. Thank you each for your smart work curbing climate pollution from the built environment.

Onward!
