Hi Madeleine,

Thanks for your interest in this project and sharing your suggestions.

In case this additional information is helpful to you: we will be addressing mitigation in addition to resilience as part of this project (both pieces are required under the HB 1181 law our work aligns with). However, we are waiting for a greenhouse gas inventory to be finished for the county before we dig into the mitigation side of things. We expect to begin discussing mitigation starting this summer, in roughly June or July.

Thank you!
Jenna

Hi,

I am a resident of Unincorporated Clark County. I have been listening in on the Climate Environmental Justice Coalition meetings and the Community Advisory Group meetings. I have been surprised that there is not more talk on climate mitigation. Climate resilience within challenged communities is important too but could we be talking about helping these communities while pushing more alternative energies locally as well. What about ways to help renters and landlords to build solar on their roofs?

I would like to see policy change so when a big box store (for instance a new one on 162nd just south of the Safeway on 4th Plain) or storage facility is built that, since it took over valuable land that was sequestering carbon via vegetation utilizing the suns energy, that it too utilize the suns energy and put solar on it's roof!

I am also concerned about the future of Clark County Farms. If a developer is wishing to build a neighborhood into farmland then can we have policy that requires that a portion of that farmland be saved or a portion be made into greenspace or parks. Farmers who are feeding the community should have as much support as developers have. They are the ones that feed us. Utilizing farmers close to home is good climate practice. Once climate change has moved forward significantly it is our food supply that will be challenged and after all everyone eats.

Thank you for considering these ideas,

Madeleine Wolfe
