Good morning all,

The Institute for Market Transformation is hosting a building performance standards EPCA webinar that folks might find useful. Here is the description and registration link:

Building performance standards (BPS) are an effective policy tool for promoting electrification and energy efficiency in existing buildings. They're also less likely to be subject to federal preemption from the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (EPCA) than many other decarbonization policy approaches. The recent industry challenges to Denver and Colorado's BPS are case studies in how difficult it is to use EPCA against BPS. Join us for a conversation about that lawsuit and the application of the California Restaurant Association v. Berkeley decision to BPS generally.

Best,

Holly
