I submitted my information to your survey on climate change and then I received The Reflector and read an article about a developer in La Center whose plan is to remove 1000 large trees but added he will "replant". Well, from what I have observed in the county that means he will clear-cut the forest and plant a few scrubby street trees. As you well know, those large trees produce the oxygen, use the CO2, provide cooling temps from the shade, provide homes for the birds and the beasts of the Earth. I am also guessing that the county or city of BG requires each developer to put in a playground.....which is a real joke if you take a look at what the put in. Clark County seems to be enamored by growth and destroying what has made Clark County desirable. It both scary and sad!
