Hi Jeff,

I also just saw this infographic/article about the impact of food, from New York Times that might be interesting to your work: The New York Times | Say a pound of beef costs \$5.34 at your local supermarket. That price, according to researchers, leaves out something important: beef's... | Instagram

Hi Jeff,

Thanks very much!

I'm attaching our impact metrics, so you can see how they connect to the emission reduction goals of your project.

Kindly,

Sandra

Good day, Sandra,

Thank you very much for forwarding this information regarding the Veganuary Workplace

Challenge. I will pass this information on to our Living Well Committee to confirm if this is something we are able to adopt for Clark County, as well as your contact information in case they have any questions.

Regards,
Jeff Delapena

Good afternoon Jeff,
My name is Sandra Hungate, I am a Clark County resident, a volunteer on the Clark County Animal Control & Protection Advisory Board, and I'm the US Director of the non-profit Veganuary. I've been getting your emails about the County Climate Project and took part in surveys.

Today I'm reaching out because I believe Clark County could benefit from the staff (and even residents) from the 2025 Veganuary Workplace Challenge.

Our free program helps reduce climate impact by encouraging people to try eating plant-based for 31 days in January. We inspired more than 25 million people globally last year, with participants reporting improvements in employee satisfaction, energy levels, overall health, and mood.

Join employers like EY, City of San Antonio, TX, Stanford Health, and Booking.com, which have all seen positive outcomes, including health benefits, employee satisfaction, media coverage, and more, from their involvement.

For more details, please visit the Veganuary Workplace Challenge webpage or feel free to reach out to me directly.

PS: we'll have a webinar about the challenge if you're interested in learning more, on Oct 3rd at 11 am PT: WEBINAR: The Veganuary Workplace Challenge | LinkedIn

I'm also happy to discuss it in a 1:1 meeting.

Kindly,
Sandra
