Unnecessary UGA expansion

Comments

The de-designation of any agricultural land for unnecessary UGA expansions would continue to undermine agricultural efforts, which would also undermine our communities' access to local food, not to mention cause irreparable damage to the land that affects ALL current residents as well as future generations. Just as our residents need housing, they also need food and clean water. The mayor of Ridgefield was quoted saying that keeping growth within the current UGA is possible, but they just don't want to because people moving to Ridgefield desire semi-rural living, so they must...develop rural ag land...Obviously this would destroy the very thing that makes our area special— semi-rural living, and clearly the only motivation here is monetary, and it steals from EVERYONE.
