The Land Study provides that land in Clark County already labeled as “agricultural resource land” truly has long-term value for farming, based on the (WAC 365-190-050)standards. 96% of this land—about 31,400 acres—is officially recognized as Prime Farmland Statewide Importance. Rural areas not currently designated for agricultural use but legally should be An impressive 98% meet the standards. Slow the urban growth, focus on farmland support. The true answer to climate resilience is in the soil.
