Message Subject
oppose further urban growth and loss of farmland

Comments
I am a lifelong county resident and have watched farmland within a mile or two of my home dwindle away and be replaced by housing developments.

There is currently plenty of housing both nationwide and in our county. There would be even more available housing if the county took bold action to actually benefit people by outlawing the proliferation of housing being used as AirBNBs. Prioritizing the greed and profit margins of development companies over the actual needs of local residents seems to be the priority of Clark County government.

Meanwhile, taking away vital farmland is adding insult to injury. We will lose important food security and local culture to enrich the few. Growing food locally brings jobs and decreases environmental impact from transportation of food grown far away.

Clark County should be focusing on investing in ways to support current and future farmers as well as improving infrastructure for current residential areas instead of allowing unchecked development that is merely growth for the sake of lining the pockets of those who already have plenty.
